

WOMAN SHOTS IN DEFENSE OF HOME

Mrs. Steffen Of McNaughton Wounds John Lee When He Breaks Into House

As the result of attempting to force his way into the home of John Steffen at McNaughton late Thursday night John Lee, a stranger, was shot and badly wounded by Mrs. Steffen. Lee is in St. Mary's Hospital where it is said he will recover.

Lee and a companion named Young walked down the Northwest track from Woodruff and arrived at McNaughton at about ten o'clock at night. Against the wishes of Young, Lee, it is stated, approached the door of the Steffen home and demanded admittance. Receiving no response he is said to have broken the lock and stumbled into the house. A man named Fingerling, who boards with the Steffen family, grabbed a shot gun and ordered Lee to go away. The intruder refused to obey the command and Fingerling hit him with the stock of the gun. This failed to faze the fellow and with a storm of abusive language he continued to stand his ground. Mrs. Steffen armed with a revolver then appeared on the scene and warned Lee to leave the house. He did not heed the warning and Mrs. Steffen opened fire on him. Lee was shot in both shoulders and for awhile it was feared that he was fatally hurt. Young, his friend, came to this city and notified the authorities who immediately went to McNaughton and removed the wounded man to this city.

As the circumstances of the shooting plainly show that Mrs. Steffen was acting only in defense of herself and home no charge can be lodged against her. Lee will no doubt be placed under arrest upon his recovery.

TIGERS LOSE GAME WITH MINOCQUA

Following up their great success in basket ball the team representing the Minocqua grammar room opened up the base ball season Sunday with a 9 to 7 win over the large and husky Rhinelander Tigers. To the large crowd of spectators the game was a dandy in every respect.

Ruggles, who struck out twenty-four men in the game with the Rhinelander South Siders, went on the mound for Rhinelander. His reputation did not frighten the Minocqua lads. With the true Spartan courage they went to bat in the first inning and before the smoke had cleared away six Minocqua players had crossed the home plate. Ruggles retired in favor of Pyrette. McNutt pitched great ball for Minocqua, striking out twelve men. His work in the fifth inning was remarkable. With three men on bases and no man out, he struck out the next three batters. All through the game his curve and clever head work had the Rhinelander boys guessing. Kennedy did the receiving for Minocqua and performed like an experienced player. The Minocqua lads played every department of the game well. Next Saturday they travel to Mercer where they meet the team representing the Mercer schools.

CHILDREN WILL GIVE OPERETTA

Public School Pupils To Present Spectacle Under Direction of Miss Buck

"The Pixies," a comic operetta in two acts will be presented by 75 public school children, under the direction of Miss Buck, supervisor of music, at the high school on Friday and Saturday evenings, May 7-8.

The operetta is a fairy spectacle bright with catchy music and dancing, having also a well sustained plot. Sunshine, a wee attendant of Titania, Queen of the fairies, is kidnapped by the goblins, who steal into Fairyland during the night. The fairies at once suspect the "goblins" but are at a loss to know how Sunshine may be restored to Fairyland. At this point the "Pixies," a band of queer little men, drop into Fairyland and Prince Florimel, their leader, tells the queen that his band will aid in the search. The goblins enlist the help of the "Furies," three old witch-like creatures and a battle follows in which the Pixies overthrow and capture them. Sunshine is restored to Fairyland by two little coons who drop down from the moon.

PELICAN LAKE SCENE OF FATAL SHOOTING AFFAIR

Conrad Truntz Dies Monday From Bullet Wound Said to Have Been Inflicted by William Flannery

Conrad Truntz, aged 27, of Antigo, died Monday noon in St. Mary's hospital from bullet wounds inflicted by a revolver in the hands of a stranger, said to be William Flannery. The shooting occurred in Pelican Lake late Saturday night and immediately following Truntz's assailant disappeared and is still at large. The wounded man was brought to the hospital in this city Sunday morning, and although operated upon, scarcely any hope was entertained for his recovery. Two shots are said to have entered Truntz's body, one lodging in his intestines and the other shattering his left thigh. He was conscious from the time of the shooting until the end.

Conflicting stories are told regarding the shooting. One story is to the effect that Truntz had had trouble with a man at a dance held in Pelican that night and was shot when he stepped out of the hall a few minutes later. This report, however, is denied by several who attended the dance; they stated that to the best of their knowledge the young man had had no unpleasantness with anyone that night.

The statement by one of the sisters of the victim, is that her brother was shot by an unknown man who leaped out of the darkness at Truntz as he was near the Northwest corner depot. A party of friends walking close behind Truntz rushed up at the sound of the shots and found him on the ground badly wounded. The one responsible for the shooting had made his escape. Truntz was able to give only a slight description of his assailant.

Sheriff Crofoot, Under-sheriff Rodd and a force of deputies are now scouring the country in the vicinity of the crime in search of the murderer. The sheriff is on the track of Flannery, but has as yet made no arrest.

The theory is advanced that

That the man who shot Truntz is alleged to be William Flannery, a stranger in the county, was ascertained by Sheriff Crofoot who returned from the vicinity of Pelican Lake Tuesday night after spending three days working on the case. There is said to be sufficient evidence against Flannery to hold him for the crime. Flannery is believed to be in hiding but Sheriff Crofoot hopes to have him under arrest within a few days.

TO BUILD THREE COUNTY BRIDGES

F. H. Parker, county Highway commissioner, and F. M. Sargent, state Highway engineer, were in Tripoli last Thursday and ordered that two new bridges be built on the Oneida-Lincoln county line west of Tripoli. Plans of the bridges will be drawn at once and the contract for their construction let within the next two weeks.

Work will be commenced soon on the new fifty foot girder steel bridge over the Wisconsin river at Hat Rapids in the town of Crescent. This structure will represent an expenditure of about $6,000. Its building will necessitate the closing of that portion of the Crescent road for at least sixty days.

Mr. Parker started work Monday on the Pine Lake, Malvern and Crescent roads.

SEEK SITE FOR POTASH PLANT

C. C. Brown and Henry Dies of Iron River, Mich., are making an auto trip through northern Wisconsin seeking a site for a potash plant. They were in this city the first of the week and Mr. Brown stated that Rhinelander is being favorably considered as a suitable location for the industry. "There is plenty of hardwood here for manufacture of potash and the city has other inducements which look good to me," said Mr. Brown. "I will return here next week and decide definitely whether or not the plant will be established in Rhinelander."

RUSHING W. & N.

According to the Crandon (Epans) can work on the construction of Wisconsin & Northern railroad is progressing very favorably, two steam shovels and a large number of men now being engaged in grading. May and June are said to be the ideal months in the year for railroad work and the grade will grow fast from now on. Higgins & McDonnell are laying a narrow gauge track from their camp eight miles from town into Crandon, to handle dirt from the steam shovel, and to transport supplies from town down to camp. They have two little dinky engines and many small cars to use on the road.

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR NEW COLLEGE

Aug. Carlson Says City's Chances for Swedish Lutheran School Excellent

Rhinelander's prospects for securing the new college soon to be established by the Swedish Lutheran conference are as good, if not better, than those of any other city in the district. This is the encouraging word brought back from Gladstone by Rev. Carl J. Silfversten and August Carlson, delegates from this city to the annual conference.

Mr. Carlson states that a committee of five was appointed at the Gladstone meeting to investigate the claims and advantages of the various cities in the district, which are contending for the college, and report at the next annual conference in Ishpeming. On this committee Rhinelander has been favored with two members, Rev. Silfversten and Mr. Carlson, and it may be taken for granted that they will leave nothing undone in their efforts to locate the school in this city. The gentlemen hope to offer such flattering inducements for the institution that the conference will see unfit to consider any other city. Escanaba is another strong contender for the college and the commercial club of that city is ready to submit an excellent proposition for its establishment there. It is said, Mr. Carlson, however, feels positive that Escanaba will not be considered as the conference has decided to place the new orphan's home and home for the aged in that city. To grant Escanaba the college would be unfair to the other cities in the district.

At the recent conference Mr. Carlson was also appointed as a member of the executive committee.

BIG DEMAND FOR SEED POTATOES

(Written by W. D. Juday.)

Oneida county no doubt has sold more certified seed potatoes this year than any other county in the state. The growers who have had this stock for sale have very carefully sorted it and none but desirable seed has been sold. This means that our county will have a reputation for producing good seed which in another year will bring us many more orders. Now Oneida county always wants to be at the top in the potato game and why would it not be a good plan to have it sold next fall that every Oneida county grower receiving certification, had treated his seed with formaldehyde and sprayed with Bordeaux Mixture. That would be a strong advertisement and mean the sale of large quantities of seed. Buyers emphasize strongly their desire to get disease free seed and are going to make their purchases where the greatest precautions have been taken to prevent disease.

It is easy to treat seed. Simply make up a solution by adding one pint of formaldehyde to 30 gallons of water and then soak the potatoes in this solution for two hours. After soaking let the potatoes dry and store in a clean bag or crate until ready for cutting. To make a solution of Bordeaux Mixture slack 5 pounds of fresh lime and add enough water to make 25 gallons, dissolve 5 pounds of blue vitriol in 25 gallons of water, then pour these two solutions into a third vessel allowing the two streams to meet. Make the first application of Bordeaux Mixture about the time the plants are 10 inches high. Continue this spraying during the season at intervals of from 10 days to 2 weeks. Every grower will find it to his advantage to use these two precautions since they prevent so many diseases which cut down the yield and profits per acre.

That iron was found in large quantities in the epic age in India is evidenced by the fact that it was then employed in making massive statues. This past week, Henry Stauffer, director of the Efficiency Institute department of the Anti-Saloon League, spent several days in the city, and after several meetings of the pastors and men interested in the movement, formed an organization, which will conduct an anti-alcohol educational campaign, and at some time during the coming year, expects to hold one of the Efficiency Institutes. The first one, which was held at Appleton about a month ago was a decided success, and the next one is to be held in Oshkosh some time in May.

At these institutes the evening programs are largely filled by home people. Churches, employers of labor, teachers, physicians, lawyers and others contribute toward the warfare on alcohol. With the exhibits, they try to impress that "Abstinence, means Efficiency and Safety." Mr. Stauffer, in speaking of the meaning and purposes of the enterprise, said "The efficiency institute is a new means of instructing a moral problem for every community, guarding the injurious effects of alcoholic liquors. It is a generally recognized fact that the chief hindrance to human efficiency in our day is the drink habit, which creates a moral problem for every community. The aim of the efficiency institute is to set before the men, women and children, in the most impressive way, the conclusions reached by the leading scientists of Germany, Great Britain and the United States regarding the effects of alcohol on body and mind. These conclusions, it must be admitted, are directly contrary to all our inherited notions regarding the healthfulness, necessity and value of alcohol.

"Those who have earned the right to speak with authority on this subject Mr. Stauffer stated, 'Agree in calling alcohol a poison.' Where's the Wheels?

Two-year-old Harry had never seen a live lamb, his only knowledge of that animal being derived from a toy one on wheels. While visiting grandfather on the farm, he was taken to the sheep pen to see the lambs. After looking at them for a few minutes, he looked up at his grandfather with a puzzled expression, and asked: "Where's the wheels?"

Australia's Animal Pests.

Australia is cursed with certain pests, such as rabbits, wild dog, kangaroo and blowfly. Large sums of money are spent in an endeavor to lessen the number of rabbits. It is estimated that in Victoria alone 150,000,000 were put to death in 1913. It is generally admitted that ten rabbits eat as much as one sheep, and many graziers have long since realized that they cannot profitably run sheep on properties infested with rabbits.

Bubonic Plague Ravages.

Bubonic plague appeared in Europe in 1302. It had started in Asia where more than 200,000,000 of human beings perished. After reaching Europe the plague lasted 20 years, and during that period it carried off 50,000,000 persons. When it began Norway had a population of 2,500,000, when it ended this great population had been reduced to fewer than 300,000.

EVENTS OF WEEK IN NEARBY TOWNS

STEVENS POINT

Frank Check and F. Printz, both awaiting trial on the charge of boing habitual criminals, made their escape from the county jail by sawing the bars of a window with a back saw. The men left a note to the sheriff stating that they were not guilty of the charge against them and they were going somewhere else and show people they could "make good." They ended the note by wishing the sheriff "a useless chase."

Grand Rapids—

A large brass whistle, stolen from the Lyons mill eleven years ago, was found this week by the sons of J. B.

Arpin in a culvert near the Arpin homestead. The thieves climbed approaching the building, unfasted the whistle which weighed over 100 pounds, and carried it away. Some years ago the mill was torn down and the missing whistle was forgotten. It is presumed that the thieves found the plunder too heavy to carry.

Park Falls—

The Park Falls Lumber company's mill resumed operations Tuesday after having been closed for the last six months. The plant has been repaired and almost entirely remodeled.

New machinery has been installed.

ditions built and many other improvements made which are expected to increase the capacity of the plant by about 50,000 feet per day.

Wayward—

Through the efforts and magnanimity of H. E. Rohlf, the farmers in the vicinity of Hayward and Sawyer county are to have a demonstration station, which will be under the direction of A. Albert of the Co-lege of Agriculture. The five acre plot is located on the Bean Brook road of the farm of H. E. Rohlf.

willen was donated by him for this purpose, and will be in plain view of passersby. M. L. Musbak, of the Agricultural College will visit the station at intervals while A. Albert will be here perhaps once a week to supervise the work.

After twice knocking down and attempting to gore Phillip Little, son of Wm. Little, who was leading him, a big Ayrshire bull ran wild in the streets of Iron River until it dropped dead from exhaustion. The bull, three-year old, was being driven by Mr. Little's farm with the younger Little leading him by a rope attached to a ring in his nose; and the elder

Little following behind. The latter stopped to talk to a neighbor while the other went on with the animal.
which a few minutes later was seen charging back down the road. Shortly afterward the young man showed up, clothes torn and his face and body cut and bruised. The bull dropped dead near the South Shore crossing.

Ironwood—

Ore shipments start out slowly on this range this year, as is the fact on all other ranges in the Lake Superior district. The general impression among railroad men and others who have studied the matter seems to be that the shipments will be light during the forepart of the season, but will increase largely by the middle of the summer and that the season as a whole will be a fairly good one.

The Wednesday Evening Study Club will make an inspection of the several grocery stores and meat markets in the city in about ten days for the purpose of ascertaining their sanitary condition and will publish what will be known as a "White List," being a list of all places found in a nice clean and tidy condition.

JOIN TELEPHONE LINES

A. K. Tresness, C. J. Jensen, J.
W. Kelley and G. C. Garber representing the Oneida Farmers' Telephone company were present at a meeting of the Tomahawk Light

Telephone & Improvement company
Wednesday night. Steps were then taken in an effort to connect the Oneida county rural telephone line with the local system.

All arrangements with the local telephone company were satisfactorily agreed upon and with the Oneida county farmers heading the project, the prospects of the connection seem to be of the best.

This connection would be decidedly beneficial to Tomahawk as it would open to direct communication all of the northern farming country, which at present is a source of trade.—Tomahawk Leader.

BELGIAN NUNS COMING

The Superior Telegram states that Belgian nuns, now finding domicile in Holland on account of the ravages of their country, the destruction of and commandeering of their institutions due to the German invasion will be brought to the Catholic district of Superior. They will take charge of the work in various institutions, both those now in existence and others to be established.

The New North for all the news.

FLASHES FROM THE HEADLIGHT

Two thousand steel box cars, fifty underframe cabooses and fifty steel passenger cars will be built by order of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company. Bids for the construction are being asked for and the cars must be completed by midsummer. The equipment will cost about $3,000,000. The announcement of this proposed expenditure is hailed as another evidence of returning prosperity.

Several switch engines for use on the Gogebic range during the ore shipping season have passed through this city over the Northwestern line the past week. Indications are that the summer of 1915 will witness unusual activity in the iron industry and good times are looked for on the range.

Some one has suggested that the Northwestern railway company place ice water, or better still, a sanitary drinking fountain in its passenger depot in this city. The suggestion is a good one and if carried out would no doubt be appreciated by the traveling public.

The danger to the traveling public arising from interstate migration of tuberculosis persons has been made the subject of investigation by the United States public health service.

Proper precautions to prevent the spread of infection are observed by only a small per cent of the afflicted.

The sanitation of Pullman cars is systematized, the instructions specific, and the work is generally, carefully performed.

The majority of other coaches (the greatest number of consumptives occupy day coaches) are imperfectly cleaned.

Railway coaches are a possible source of infection in tuberculosis, and whether they are or not, their sanitation should be regulated.

Israel Bean, for nearly fifty years a conductor on the Chicago & Northwestern railway, has been retired on a pension of seventy-five dollars per month. Mr. Bean is seventy years of age and during his long service in the company's employ never had a mark registered against him. His "run" was on the Ashland division with headquarters at Antigo.

The first newspaper printed in the English language, with its old English type and its quaint account of events in foreign countries, was a pamphlet issued in 1521. ## HER GOLDENROD DYE

By MURIEL CHANCE.

It was the most wonderful experience that Nancy had ever had. For a long time after it happened she could not make herself believe that it was true.

She was weaving in the attic, making the homespun rugs which had become a village industry in the little Pennsylvania town. Her winter's work brought in enough money to buy a few luxuries for her bedridden mother and clothes for Nontie, at school. Suddenly a knock came below and, when Nancy went down, she saw a young man, a stranger, standing at the door.

"I am told that you make the best rugs in the village, Miss McLane," he said. "May I see some of your work?" She showed him some. Certainly the contours were straight, and not highly dyed like those of most of the village rugs. However, the young man was interested in other details than that.

"My name is Cyrus Brown, and I am from the rug factory at Altoona," he said. "We want to buy the secret of your vegetable dye—the yellow one."

Nancy laughed. "There isn't any secret about that," she answered. "Everybody here knows that. It's goldenrod. You steep the flowers in hot water and add a little alcohol and—"

"And Nancy gave him the secret. 'May I come another day when you are making the extract?' asked the young man."

"Yes, I reckon I'll be making some this day next week," Nancy answered. "Seems to me, Nancy," grumbled her mother, when he had gone, "you might have got hold of a young fellow like that instead of that good-for-nothing Jim Penny."

Nancy said nothing. But she sighed a little that night when Jim, out of work as usual, sat glumly at her side and asked, for the tenth time that year, when she would marry him.

Nancy and Jim had been engaged for years. But he had never held a position more than a week or two, and, while the girl felt the bond of old association, she had begun to think seriously of the future.

When Mr. Brown called, a week later, Nancy had a steaming pot of goldenrod extract upon the table, and he was quickly initiated into the mystery of dyeing the fabrics.

"It seems too good to be true," said the young man. "We thought those vegetable dyes had been forgotten long ago. I am authorized to pay you this in remuneration." And he handed her a crisp bundle of bills.

Nancy drew back. "Why, Mr. Brown," she said, "everybody knows how to make goldenrod dye. It isn't worth anything—really."

But he left the bills upon the table and, declining to stay for supper this time, departed. When he had gone Nancy looked at the money. There were five hundred dollars!

Breathless, she ran after the visitor, but he was out of sight. And so she came back and wrote a letter to the rug factory explaining that a mistake had been made.

Her mother, though inclined to agree with this view, was strongly against Nancy's posting the letter.

That evening Nancy, radiant, ran to Jim with a cry of pleasure and told him what had occurred, showing him the bills.

To her amazement Jim became almost inarticulate with anger. "Five hundred dollars for a trade secret!" he shouted. "Why, it's worth five thousand at the least!"

"But, Jim, everybody knows how to make goldenrod dye," Nancy protested.

"We'll tell them that we stipulated for five thousand," he said, "and I'll take this lot, Nancy, to make a first payment on that cottage I spoke about."

A few days later the young man called again.

"We have received a letter from a Mr. Penny, threatening to bring suit on your behalf for five thousand dollars—" he began. "The company sent me to investigate. Do you really make such a claim, Miss McLane?"

"Mr. Brown, I don't want to take a penny!" she cried. "Why, I—I gave you the secret and—"

She brought the money and thrust it into his hands. "That shows you what I feel about it!" she cried.

And it took the whole afternoon, until supper time, before Mr. Brown could convince Nancy of the value of a commercial secret. In fact, it took so long that Jim came in upon the couple unawares as Mr. Brown was explaining to Nancy after supper was over.

"Hum! I guess I see where the nigger lay," remarked the young man, surveying the couple with a cool stare. "Nan, if you're going to let yourself be cheated out of your money by a swindler like that, all I say is, I wash my hands of you."

Nancy got up with dignity. "Perhaps you would like to talk to Mr. Brown alone," she said meaningly.

But Jim Penny beat a hasty retreat. Writing letters was more to his taste. He wrote Nancy a long one after the engagement was announced. It contained a request for money. But the girl never knew that, because she put it in the fire unopened. She had left Jim Penny behind her now that the new life was at hand.

"He's just another trade secret between us, dear," said her fiancé, laughing. (Copyright by W. G. Chapman.)

THE MOVING FINGER

By HAROLD CARTER.

"No, sir, I won't let you look at my eyes, nor I won't have you round here neither," snarled "Pop" Hendon to young Doctor Gray.

The young physician had only spent three months in Greenville, but that was quite long enough to convince him that "Pop" Hendon was, as the neighbors said, the crankiest old man in Bretton county.

Doctor Gray did not mind the old fellow's moods. Before he had gone blind, five years before, Hendon had been a good neighbor and citizen. Since his blindness he had become morose and suspicious. The worst feature of the situation, so far as the doctor was concerned, was that "Pop" suspected the young man's love for his only child, Alice, and took a malicious pleasure in taunting him about it.

The young fellow was not yet in a position to marry. Alice would have waited for him; but she could not leave her father. She was all he had. The young doctor had a last interview with his sweetheart that afternoon.

"Dearest, I will wait for you as long as is necessary," she said. "But so long as my father lives we must be just good friends and nothing more. If he were not blind I would leave all and come to you."

Gray understood. He kissed her fondly and went back to his office, resolved to throw himself with all his energy into his work and try to forget, until the time came to claim her.

And so a year passed by. Rarely, when Gray had occasion to pass the house, he would see the old man, implacable as ever, seated upon his porch, spelling out the Braille words with his right forefinger. He seemed conscious of the doctor's presence, and would look up and scowl heavily when Gray went by.

One day Gray had an urgent call on the telephone. It was from Alice. "Won't you come up at once?" she begged. "Doctor Clifton is away and father has had a bad accident."

A medical man knows no enmities where his profession is concerned. Half an hour later Gray was at the house and being shown into the old man's sick room.

Hendon had been knocked down by an automobile while trying to cross the street. He had taken malicious delight in running away from his daughter, and had been struck fairly by the machine. He was badly bruised; but, what was worse, the tendons of his right hand had been crushed.

Gray saw at a glance that, while the hand could be made serviceable, Hendon would never again be able to straighten the fingers completely.

"You're the young fellow who used to be sweet on Alice, ain't you?" he snarled. "I thought you'd drop her as soon as you learned there wasn't any money coming with her."

"Let me see that hand, please," answered Gray.

A week later "Pop" Hendon learned the truth—his hand would be useful for all purposes except one; never again would he be able sufficiently to flex the forefinger so as to feel the raised type with the delicate nerve tissue underneath the first joint.

When the news was broken to him the old man's agony was painful to witness. He lay still without speaking for days together, interspersing these periods of moroseness, however, with outbreaks of maniacal fury. At such times only Gray could restrain him from flinging himself out of the window. Somehow the young doctor seemed to have acquired a certain influence over the morose old man.

It was after one of these maniacal spells that Gray addressed Hendon, who was lying exhausted upon his bed.

"Mr. Hendon," he said, "I may as well tell you that I took the occasion just now to examine your eyes."

Hendon lay on the bed in dogged silence.

"I believe your trouble is nothing but cataract," he continued. "I have been to the doctors who examined you before and seen their records. What they told you was that your case was incurable at present, but might be alleviated later."

"Yes, trying to fool me into spending more money on 'em," snarled "Pop" Hendon.

"No, sir," answered Doctor Gray decisively. "A cataract cannot be operated upon until it has reached a certain stage of hardness, about a year after it begins. You were the victim of your own suspicions. You could have been cured years ago. You can be cured now."

"Will you do it, Doc?" gasped old Hendon, turning his face upon Gray's with a look of wistful hope in his eyes.

Two weeks later "Pop" Hendon, seated in the dining room, waited for the bandage to be lifted. The morose old man had been strangely silent during the period of waiting.

Doctor Gray took off the bandages. "Well, sir?" he demanded.

"Pop" Hendon leaped out of his chair. "I can see!" he screamed, clasping Gray violently by the hands. "Lord, I can see again. Doc, how good the world is!"

With which sentiment the doctor was in entire sympathy, as he drew Alice toward him and kissed her. And "Pop" Hendon beamed on them through his heavy lenses. (Copyright by W. G. Chapman.)

WHEN TO YIELD IS TO WIN

In love, as in battle, a retreat often in the long run spells a victory.

Those who give way graciously in trifles usually command attention in great things.

The love that is gained by this sweet submission serves to win approval for us when we wish to make requests of a more serious nature.

A girl who is gifted with that inestimable virtue that we call tact will often obtain her own way by apparently yielding in the prettiest manner possible.

She seems to lay down her arms at the first demand to surrender that is made her. Yet really she is but retreating in order to advance the more surely later on.

Over unimportant points it is prudent to give way, then when it is a question of a really serious matter one can come to the attack with renewed vigor; no strength has been lost in petty squabbling or disputing.

Save your ammunition, therefore, for the big things of life, and waste no time or strength upon trying to get your own way in small things and thereby irritating others unnecessarily and prejudicing them against you.

If anything the company was better than ever and the plays which were presented to large audiences nightly, were exceptionally pleasing. Miss Flora De Voss, leading lady is a clever actress and carried her parts in the various productions in a faultless manner. Although she has frequently appeared on the stage of the Grand she seemed this time at her best. Miss DeVoss is supported by a well balanced and talented company.

J. B. Rotnour, manager of the Flora De Voss company, announces that the troupe will appear here again next fall.

Almost plaintively he asked the question.

"It's wonderful," she said in almost a whisper. "I could sit here and look at it for hours."

"Look at me, instead, Persis. Oh, I mean it," he plunged ahead now recklessly. "I never painted a stroke on canvas in my life. I'm not Walt Meredith. Can you stand any more?" She nodded her head, her brown eyes filling with tears, but a smile on her lips.

"My name's—"

"I know it," she said. "It's Holt Chambers. The little boy who sells papers down at the hotel told me long ago. I'm awfully glad you told me the truth. He likes the truth."

"Did you care more for old Speartooth than for me?" he asked. "I'll buy it for you from Walt for a wedding gift."

She turned her back on the canvas and held out her hands to him. Art was vanquished.

IN THE LAND OF BUNGALOW TOWN

A History of the Not Very Remarkable Doings of the Do Nothing Club

According to a pre-arranged plan, on Sunday, June 31, Capt. Charon was out early with his launch and took on board President Dad and Mrs. Dad, Mr. and Mrs. Bluejoint, stopped on the way down the lake and took on Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass. He then proceeded to the upper end of Little Tomahawk for the vice president and wife and the scribe and wife.

These wild worshippers of Pan made a jolly crowd. We asked old Capt. Charon how he had come to lay aside his grumpiness and had become so noisy. The scribe was mean enough to remark that he once saw a picture of Capt. Charon and he was represented as being nearly all bones but now he carried more than two hundred pounds of adipose. He also asked the Capt. how he had busied himself during the many years since he had ferried the last poor soul across the mystic river Styx, and what had become of his old ferry boat.

Capt. Charon replied that it was his grandfather that ran the ferry boat. On the old gentleman's last trip, he had broken an oar, the boat became unmanageable and they had evidently all drifted into hades as neither boat, passengers, nor commander had ever been heard from since. He did not think a ferry boat propelled by oars would be congenial to him and travel on the Styx had fallen off and he preferred to run a gasoline launch on Tomahawk Lake, where there is more noise and excitement.

The day was lovely, there was not a ripple on the water nor did a leaf tremble on the trees. The forest and hills along the banks were reflected as from a mirror. Pan played his flute and Neptune smiled.

As we neared a certain wharf the scene was somewhat familiar yet appeared strange, we also saw a portly gentleman, with his thumbs in the arm holes of his vest standing there watching us as we neared. The gentleman appeared somewhat familiar and yet we took him for a tourist. As we drew up to the wharf Al Falfa asked him if he were the proprietor here. He stared at us a moment and then asked in a grievous tone, "Don't you know who I am? I am Mr. Ponderoski, I am the mayor of the city of Bungalow. I am kept very busy, too, these days with the duties of my office." We all said oh! in chorus. Mrs. Bluegrass begged his pardon for not recognizing an old acquaintance, where the scribe, to smooth matters, said he would make a note of all this in the journal of proceedings and he would especially note how Mr. Ponderoski had increased in his belt diameter. Here the president urged Capt. Charon to move on as something might happen.

Capt. Charon once owned an island in Tomahawk Lake, but doesn't now. However, we decided to take possession for the day and cook and eat our dinner there.

It was decided we should have fish for dinner, that being the case it would be necessary to have wood gotten with which to cook the fish if they were caught. President Dad said his attack of Minocquitis had today taken a turn in the direction of fishing. The Capt. had to go along to run the boat and Snodgrass had to go as guide. Al Falfa, Bluejoint and the scribe were to get the wood. But the scribe insisted that his attack of Minocquitis had incapacitated him for any greater exertion than to entertain the ladies while we were waiting for dinner.

Al Falfa gave the scribe a withering look but said nothing. Mrs. Snodgrass wanted to know where women's rights came in on this expedition. Mrs. Peppergrass said the women on this occasion would probably have the right to clean the fish if any were caught.

The fishermen were gone rather a long time and when they returned they reported all the fish had been killed by the fish commissioner in spawning time. We had to content ourselves with hard boiled eggs for dinner. Charon said dinners like this was what had made him grow rather dyspeptic and gloomy. Bill Dad said it could be worse as he had fared worse at a free lunch counter in a Milwaukee saloon.

Mrs. Peppergrass suggested a toast and the vice president responded with a speech. Al Falfa replied that he never undertook but one speech and then his audience threw eggs at him and they were not hard boiled either. Mrs. Snodgrass remarked that one of the eggs was evidently a goose egg and half of the shell must have stuck to the top of his head. This was a mean dig at a baldheaded man.

Pres. Dad said Al Falfa could be excused from making a speech but we would all discuss the merits of baldheadedness. Mrs. Bluejoint asserted that baldheadedness, as for looks, was just horrid, while Mrs. Dad said she never knew a bald-headed man to amount to much and they, always, either charged up their bald heads to their early ploty or to being henpecked. Mrs. Charon said a bald headed man is simply just simply awful.

Al Falfa replied that no public spirited man would wear a great quantity of hair and scatter disease germs; that it required less exertion to comb a head with only a fringe of hair. It was also a matter of economy as he always got his hair cut at half price. He said a great amount of hair looked all right on the head of a woman or on the neck and tail of a horse. Mrs. Peppergrass said comparisons are odious and such a one is unbearable.

Peppergrass asserted that bald-headedness is a sign of intellectuality. In proof of this no one ever saw a baldheaded ape, and very rarely a baldheaded woman. It was nearly always men of superior minds that were bald. The ladies could hardly keep down their wrath but they permitted the scribe to proceed. He said that every male child had been given, at the time of his birth, the opportunity of choosing between hair and brains, that the vice president and himself had chosen brains. Snodgrass said "what do you think of that?" Mrs. Snodgrass said it was no evidence of brains to be able to say mean things. Mrs. Peppergrass gave Peppergrass a look that signified a certain lecture that night. Mrs. Dad and Mrs. Bluejoint said an argument like that was outrageous.

Here the president called attention to the fact that the ladies were not conforming to the rules of the club and were putting too much physical vigor into their vocabulary for people afflicted with Minocquitis.

Dinner being over, Charon proposed a further voyage down the lake and as we moved along the green banks enjoying ourselves as only sick people can, we found our voices echoed. The question then arose as to the cause of echoes.

Snodgrass and Bluejoint started out to discuss the subject at length but the crowd began to yawn. Mrs. Al Falfa said she would like to have it in a few words what an echo is anyway. Al Falfa said an echo is the only thing yet discovered that could beat a woman out of the last word. The ladies were quiet for at least thirty seconds.

The day was fast drawing to a close and it was suggested we turn our faces homeward. We decided the day had been spent in perfect conformity with the rules of the club—in as useless a manner as possible.

But as Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass stepped out of the boat upon their wharf, Mrs. Snodgrass said she felt like doing one useful thing that day, and she would too, if the scribe and vice-president were the only occupants of the boat. She would tip the boat over and—drown both the wretches.

Respectfully submitted this 31 day of June in the year X Y Z.

SCRIBE.

Approved by the president.

Overwhelmed

Our laws and public sentiment permit jailing a poor chap who is "dead-sick of living" and isn't successful in his attempts to quit by the assistance of poison or personal violence against himself. We don't mind if prison confinement makes him even more miserable than he was before.

A police officer is justified in compelling a person, at the point of a pistol if necessary, to desist in efforts at self-destruction. While I've never heard of an officer's actually killing a man for thus resisting the law, I do recall an instance in which a Milwaukee police officer by threats of shooting, stopped an intended suicide by drowning.

These regulations against suicide are not based, it would seem, upon any fear of firearms on the part of the general public, for we permit their unregulated sale. Again, we are not afraid of poison, for we permit the sale of most undesirable suicide poisons without more than a bluff at statutory and administrative prohibition.

Apparently, the sentiment against suicide is based upon one of the most lovable traits of human nature.

An individual who desires to commit suicide is generally looked upon as a self-confessed failure, as one unable to take care even of himself. However far short, as a people, we may fall in appreciating and truly evaluating other evidences of self-confessed failure and want, we can't mistake the genuineness of the misery which compels a bona fide attempt upon one's own life.

According to the United States figures, the number of suicides remains fairly constant, although "hard times" can easily be identified by an increased number. There are, in normal years, nearly four times as many suicides among men as among women.

Without studying minutely or even in detail the causes of suicide, the reason in each case is, of course, the arrival at the conclusion that life is a failure. For men, judging by age classification of the U. S. Registration bureau, from 45 to 50 years is the period when hope of success and position is most likely to snuff out. They may have failed repeatedly before this, in their business, in control of drinking or of drug habit, without completely losing the hope of "coming back."

For women, failure is much more tragic, as is generally recognized. For them a single, well advertised blunder in their most important business and interest in life makes future success almost impossible. It does not come as a surprise, then, to find that the greatest number of suicides among women occur between the ages of 20 and 25.

A large percentage of suicides could be prevented by making it more difficult for momentarily irresponsible and depressed individuals to obtain the means. Better health conditions will help a great deal. A large percentage, however, will be prevented by vast gains in education, morals and general welfare.

Corinth, Miss.:—"I am a city tax collector and seventy-four years of age. I was in a weak, run-down condition so that I became exhausted by every little exertion. My druggist told me about Vinol, and I decided to take it. In a week I noticed considerable improvement; I continued its use and now I have gained twenty pounds in weight, and feel much stronger. I consider Vinol a fine tonic to create strength for old people."—J. A. PRICE, Corinth, Miss.

As one grows old their organs act more slowly and less effectively than in youth, circulation is poor, the blood gets thin, the appetite poor and digestion weak. Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, is the ideal strengthener and body builder for old folks because it creates a good healthy appetite, strengthens digestion, enriches the blood, improves circulation and in this natural manner builds up, strengthens and invigorates feeble, run-down, nervous and aged people, and if it does not do all we say, we will pay back your money.

A WARNING TO MANY Some Interesting Facts About Kidney Troubles.

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot readily be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1913, in the state of New York alone. Therefore, it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation, in most cases, is soon realized, according to sworn statements and verified testimony of those who have used the remedy.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention, and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper, enclose ten cents and they will gladly forward it to you by Parcel Post.

Swamp-Root is sold by every druggist in bottles of two sizes—50c. and $1.00.

STANDARD Long Cut Tobacco

We've spent fifty years and millions of dollars creating tobacco brands. And we know that the reason STANDARD pleases the hearty smoker is because its quality is honest and its value the biggest.

We use pure Kentucky leaf—in STANDARD. We carefully age it for three to five years so as to bring out its full richness. The process can't be hurried. So you see no other tobacco can be the same as STANDARD—and STANDARD itself can never vary in quality.

No matter what tobacco you may be smoking now, just try STANDARD for a week, and see if STANDARD doesn't give you greater satisfaction, day in and day out, working or resting, outdoors or indoors. By the end of the week you'll be a permanent user of STANDARD.

Explaining "Memory"

When you speak of others as having a good memory, you do not mean that at all. Instead of meaning that the man with a "good memory" has accurately perceived an event in the full ramifications of all its details, and recorded it in his whole human texture ready for reproduction at will, what you really indicate is that he has good power of retention, irrespective of detailed accuracy or faithfulness of the full recollection.—Dr. Leonard Keene Hirschberg.

Special Ink Evolved.
As the carbon of ordinary printing inks does not bleach in using printed material for new paper, a French firm has patented a special ink. The black pigment is a compound from tanbark extracts acting on ferrous sulphate, and this is incorporated with resin, or mineral oil and resin, or boiled linseed oil. In reprinting the paper the ink is bleached with an acid solution of a hypochloride, chlorine gas, or hydrochloric or oxalic acid, the pulp being made perfectly white.

IN A DRIZZLING RAIN

By HOPE AINSLEE.

Copyright, D.M., by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

A soft drizzling rain was falling the roses in Constance Atwood's cheeks to come out and get wet. And the roses were fast appearing as she walked briskly through the damp sinder path in Central park.

It was Saturday afternoon and Constance had promised herself that she would finish knitting the last of her six pairs of socks for the soldier boys before the Wednesday boat should have sailed. Her small brother and sister, being prevented by the rain from playing out of doors, would demand the attention of Sister Constance if she were at home. Therefore she decided to seek the shelter of a summer house in the park, where on a day like this she was sure to be alone.

A beautiful girl sitting alone in a summer house on a cold, drizzling day knitting socks is not an everyday picture. Indeed it was such an unusual sight to Donald Grey when he came upon it that he almost stopped in his course to stare.

Constance looked up casually as he passed and her calm, level gaze met his; then she dropped her eyes, continued her knitting and the man strode on through the winding path.

But the man's peace of mind had been disturbed. Only his deep-rooted sense of chivalry kept him from retracing his steps for one more look at the lovely girl. He realized that he had only a slender chance in a thousand of seeing her again, and yet at that moment he could think of no other person whom he so desired to see again—and often.

Suddenly his musings were abruptly interrupted by the approach of a big Irish park policeman leading a small child reluctantly by the hand. The officer had to stoop to keep a hold of the tiny tot.

"Gotta lost kid!" he said laughing to Donald.

Donald looked at the pretty little girl. "Fine day for a youngster like that to be alone in the park, isn't it?"

"Fine for the policeman! Says her ma's knittin' and she run off," volunteered the policeman further.

Donald Gray paled a little. "Knitting, did you say? Her—her mother?"

"Sure! Why not? Ain't they all a-doin' it day an' night for Tommy Atkins and the larks o' him?" asked the officer.

"I saw a young woman back in the summer house—a knitting," said Donald.

"Where?" asked the policeman, alertly.

"I'll show you—it's quicker," and Donald led the way back to the summer house.

The little one trotted beside the big policeman and Donald, humming gaily. She seemed not to care who her protectors were, so long as she was having a little excitement. Donald could see that much in the tot's eyes.

When she saw the trio approaching Constance stopped knitting and stared. But Donald could see at a glance that she had not lost anybody's baby. She looked from one to the other as the three drew close.

"Askin' yer pardon, lady, but did ye lose this kid?" asked the policeman.

Constance laughed. She shook her head. "No, indeed, I didn't. Is the poor baby lost?"

"She sure is—says her ma's a-knitting and she run away—"

"Ma's doin' that," said the child gaily, pointing to Constance and her knitting.

"Is she, dear?" asked Constance—and Donald realized that she had the voice, too, of his ideal. "And where did you leave your mamma?"

The child made a vague gesture. "Over home with lots o' ladies all knittin' and—"

The policeman took the child again by the hand. "Come on, kid, you'll catch cold out here. I'll find her ma all right. Much obliged." And the big policeman and the little one walked off in the drizzling rain.

Donald Gray raised his hat. "I'm sorry."

"Oh, it was quite natural, I'm sure. Don't apologize. I only hope they find the baby's mother soon. It's not a day for little ones to be out."

The girl's tone dismissed him and Donald strode on. This time he felt desperate. If he had wanted to know her after a single glance at her, he longed more than ever now that he had seen her smile, and heard her speak, had stood before her.

He would have felt utterly hopeless if he had not been a firm believer in the good Presbyterianism that everything that happens is for the best. If this was the way he was to meet her, never to see her again, why—that was all. If she were meant for him—and with his youthful, hopeful outlook on life, he believed she was—he would find her somewhere.

For nearly two years he sought her, and then, at a benefit dance given to aid the widows and children of soldiers who had fallen in the war, he was presented to her by a patroness of the evening.

"At last, Miss Atwood," he said. And although the girl only smiled, he had the satisfaction of seeing in her eyes a glad look, as if she, too, had been hoping. "And if it is fate," he said to himself, in a flash, "of course, she has been hoping, too."

Toll of Black Death.

Black death became epidemic in Asia and Europe in 1425. In a few years this black death had carried off 23,000,000 persons in Europe and 85,000,000 in Asia. In streets and roadways the dead decayed where they happened to fall. During the 800 years up to this period the plague is estimated to have killed more than 300,000,000 human beings in Europe and Asia.

Bird Feared by Snakes.

Snakes in South Africa fear the secretary bird and will even crawl away from his shadow. This bird devours snakes and can easily kill a reptile twice its size.

Buy it in Rhinelander.

A Bit to Think About.

On the doorway of an Italian cathedral are three inscriptions. The first, beneath an arch of roses reads as follows: "All that pleases is but for a moment;" the second, beneath a cross, "All that troubles is but for a moment;" and under the main arch, "That only is important which is eternal."

A Threat.

A cavalry regiment was starting for the front. Just before the column reached the railway station where they were to entrain the noisy cheering of the crowd in the street caused a big bay mare ridden by a weather-beaten sergeant to grow very restive and troublesome. She reared and plunged so that her rider was overlured to remark as he held her firmly with one hand and patted her neck with the other: "Be done, Lucy! Be done! A little more of this and you shan't go with us at all. I'll leave you at home, I will."

Consoling Philosophy.

Perhaps if one were browsing around, amusing himself trying to hit upon the most consoling bit of philosophy ever written, this of Socrates would be easy to surpass. "If all our misfortunes were laid in one heap, whence every one must take an equal portion, most people would be content to take their own and depart."

FOR OLD-FASHIONED CAKE

Recipe That Has Not Been Improved
on Since Our Grandmothers Used to Make It.

Fruit for this should be prepared in advance as follows: Six cupsful of currants, washed, dried and picked. Three cupsful sultana raisins, three cupsful of citron cut in fine strips, one-half cupful candied lemon peel, two cupsful of almonds blanched and cut in shreds. In a warm bowl mix four cupsful of butter, and four cupsful of sugar, granulated or confectioner's, beat these together until very light. Break ten eggs into another bowl, do not beat them.

Cover a watter with a big sheet of paper; sift four pints of flour over this, add the fruit and the following spices: two teaspoonfuls each of nutmeg, mace and cinnamon, one tablespoonful each of cloves and allspice. Mix these together and stand aside ready for use. Have ready in a little pitcher one-half pint best brandy. Select a deep cake tin and grease with butter, line it inside with white paper and on the outside and bottom with four or five thicknesses of very thick wrapping paper which you must tie on. Have your oven hot and the fire banked so it will not burn out quickly. Now beat the butter and sugar once more, add the eggs two at a time, beating the mixture after each addition. When the eggs are all used, turn in the flour and fruit with brandy, mix thoroughly, pour into the prepared cake tin, cover with several thicknesses of brown paper, and bake eight hours, keeping the oven steady and clear.

Remove from the oven and allow it to stand on tin sheet until quite cold. Ice with a thin coat of white icing top and sides and stand in a cool oven to dry, then give it a second coat of thick icing and ornament according to fancy. An icing made of white egg, a few drops of cold water and confectioner's sugar is the best for the thick icing.

BEFORE THE HEAVY COURSE

Some Delicious Appetizers That Are Not at All Hard to Acquire or Prepare.

The hors d'oeuvre is not much used by private families in America, but a dish of any of the things used will admirably set off a modest meal. For oysters or clams, cooked or raw, two hours before serving chop two or three shallots very fine and put them in a saucedish with salt, pepper, vinegar and oil. Pass this around with the shellfish, supplying small plates for holding the sauce. Another excellent hors d'oeuvre can be made of green pepper, several slices of Bermuda onion, and one firm, fresh tomato. Peel the tomato and denude the pepper of seeds. Then cut the last in fine shreds; putting these on top of a slice of onion laid in turn on a slice of tomato. But do this individual arrangement after the vegetables have marinated in a dressing of olive oil, lemon juice or vinegar and salt and pepper. Anchovies, preserved in oil, are famous appetizers, and they are served as they come on a little dish with hard-boiled eggs chopped fine, capers and minced parsley.

SAID BY THE SAGES

As "unkindness has no remedy at law," let its avoidance be with you a point of honor.—Hosea Ballou.

The pleasures of the palate deal with us like Egyptian thieves, who strangle those whom they embrace.—Seneca.

Memory is the primary and fundamental power, without which there could be no other intellectual operation.—Johnson.

If the wicked flourish, and thou suffer, be not discouraged. They are fated for destruction; thou art dieted for health.—Fuller.

Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks and make but an interior survey of your good selves.—Shakespeare.

The fact that God has prohibited despair gives misfortune the right to hope all things, and leaves hope free to dare all things.—Mme. Swetchina.

A faithful and true friend is a living treasure, inestimable when gone. Nothing is more common than to talk of a friend; nothing more difficult than to find one; nothing more rare than to improve by one as we ought.—Anon.

MISERLINESS

Miserliness is a form of insanity.

Misers differ in cast of countenance from other persons.

Disinclination to social intercourse is another characteristic.

Hiding money in out-of-the-way places is a characteristic of misers.

Some of the famous misers ate diseased meat and lived in filth, although they possessed hundreds of thousands of dollars.

One famous miser "played dead" for two days, thinking that his domestics would fast for that time, and thus save some expense.

"When money talks," remarked the Man on the Car, "nobody tells it to shut up."—Toledo Blade.

Nature was kind when she so constructed man that he cannot really kick himself.—Albany Journal.
